

BOBBY BOERMANS | Biography

Bobby Boermans (1981) is a Dutch director and producer of films, television series, music videos and commercials. He studied at the Dutch Film and Television Academy and earned his masters degree at the prestigious American Film Institute Conservatory in Los Angeles. For several years, he worked as a first AD in Hollywood and studied there under the supervision of David Fincher, George Lucas and Christopher Nolan.

Most recently, he directed the successful and critically acclaimed and high-end crime TV-series THE GOLDEN HOUR (2022) about the first 48 hours after a terrorist attack, HOOGVLIEGERS (2020) a production for which he collaborated with the Dutch Air Force and MOCRO MAFFIA (2018 - 2023), a crime series about rivaling drugs gangs in Amsterdam which has been picked up for multiple seasons.

In 2011, Bobby directed his first project, the thriller CLAUSTROFOBIA. A year later he directs his second movie, APP, which is the first movie in the world that uses a second screen in theaters. Due to its great success, the remake rights have been sold quickly thereafter.

In 2014, his movie ROFFA is nominated for the Prix d'Europe. That same year, he starts filming the first season of the popular drama series NEW NEIGHBORS, starring Daan Schuurmans and Bracha van Doesburgh. The fourth season will be released in 2019.

In 2016, his comedy film FISSA is released. That same year, he directs his first theater production, the 3D musical SKY, in collaboration with John Ewbank.

Bobby also directs commercials. He is the co-founder of production company 2CFILM, together with Robin Levita, Kees Abrahams (former Sony Pictures Television President) and producer Edvard van 't Wout.